Design Concept

The goal of this project was to design a visitor's center for a site in Joshua Tree National Park in Southern California in the United States of America. The landscape of Joshua tree varies from high mountains and rocky landforms to flat landscapes of sand and shrubs. The feature of Joshua Tree that became the inspiration for the design was the vastness of the landscape surrounding the site. The scale of the human being to the fineness of the land and the heights of the mountains is the distance. The emotional response of the visitor was a large consideration to the design.
